

Daniel Amit (1938-2007)

A man of passion: Passion for truth, for beauty, for justice, for life itself. The intensity he brought to scientific inquiry and to political involvement touched and illuminated those around him. Interactions with Dani were never dull or bland. He challenged and engaged, he questioned and tried to answer. And through it all, one could always sense his sharp intelligence, his acid sense of humor, his genuine interest, and his tender affection. Much was lost in losing him.
