

Simulations of water and artificial liquids with weakened hydrogen bonds

Ruth M. Lynden-Bell
Department of Chemistry
University of Cambridge
United Kingdom

The effect of hydrogen bonds on the properties of liquid water are investigated by comparing classical simulations of SPC/E liquid water with a family of artificial liquids with reduced hydrogen bond strengths. The effects of the tetrahedral network are studied with a family of artificial models with altered bond angles.