

A. Tsvetik, Brookhaven National Laboratory

Universal Features of the Excitation Spectrum in Generalized Gibbs Distribution Ensemble

It is shown that excitation spectra of Generalized Gibbs Ensembles (GGE) of one-dimensional integrable models with isotopic symmetry contain universal features insensitive to details of the distribution. Namely, the low energy limit of the subsystem of isotopic (for instance, spin) excitations is described by the effective action of a ferromagnet at thermodynamic equilibrium with a single temperature which stiffness is determined by the initial conditions.